1917 HAMILTONIAN

A Word Before

WHEN in the course of college events, it becomes necessary for the Junior Class to issue its annual publication, the Class meets and elects the HAMILTONIAN Board—the matter is settled. One more year has turned, and we, the Editors, endeavoring to represent the "Spirit of the Age," appear and make our bow.

The year just past has seen a little band, two hundred strong, happily toiling on the Hill in the effort of self-betterment. The benefits derived are evident from results. Hamilton has been represented in more activities during the year 1915-1916 than during any year previous. The work of the Christian Association, of the Musical and Dramatic organizations, coupled with the most successful Football season in years, and a Baseball schedule of nineteen games, is sufficient evidence. We must not forget to mention that our Faculty has co-operated, by loading on the work, to raise Hamilton scholarship one-sixth over former years.

To picture these achievements has been our aim, and insomuch as we have failed we still have the satisfaction of knowing that through our own faults future Hamiltonians shall be made better. Though we have done our best, we should be lacking much but for the whole-hearted way in which some of the other undergraduates have helped us. We take pleasure in thanking the contributors, and are done.

THE EDITORS.

To

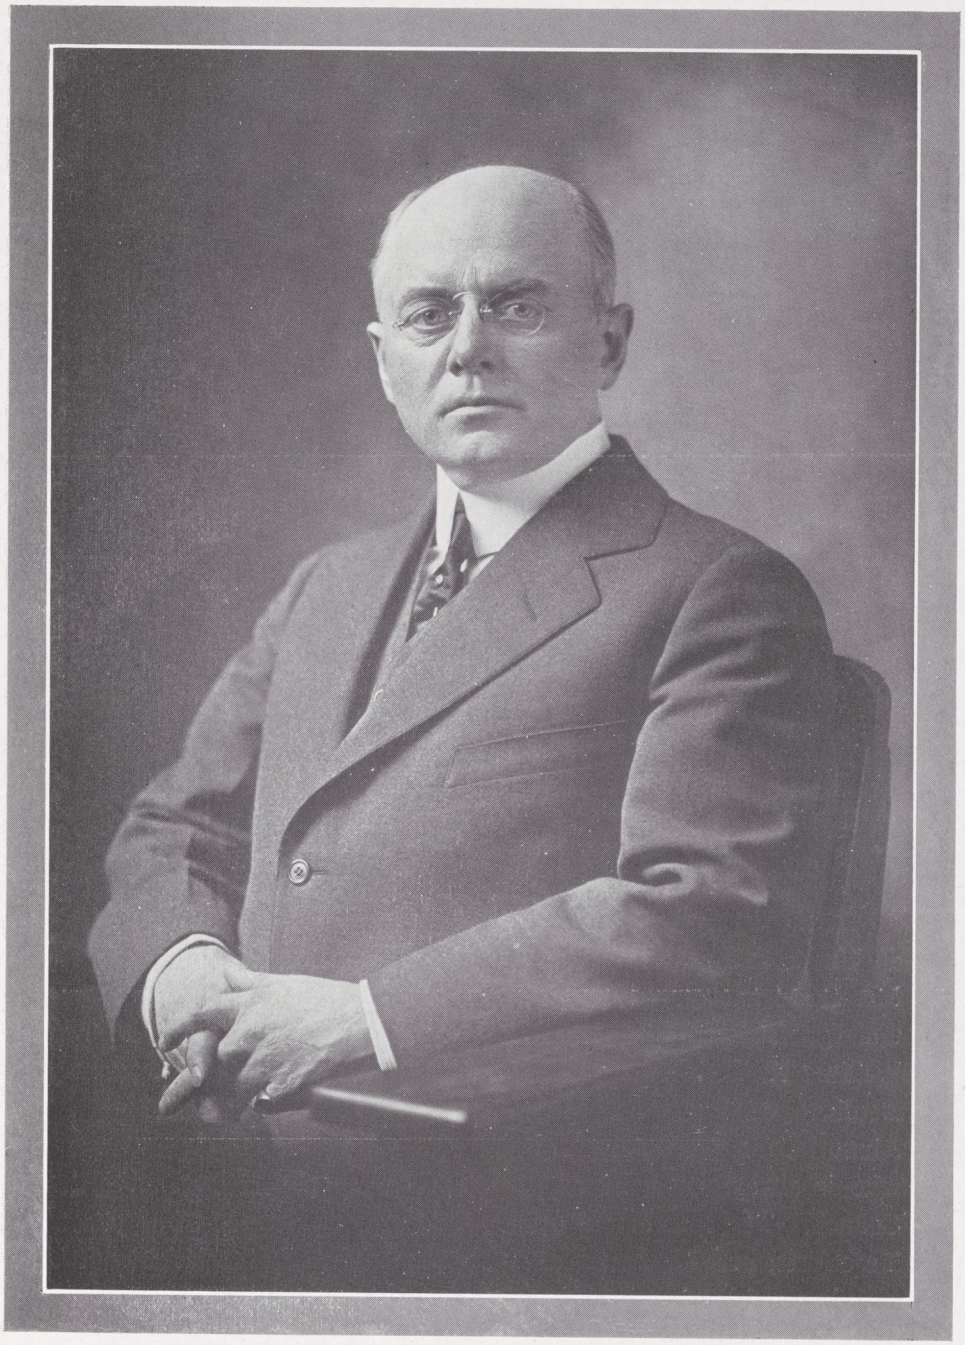
Joseph Rudd, Ph. B., LL. B.,

Trustee and Faithful Servant

of Hamilton College,

The Class of Nineteen Hundred and Seventeen

respectfully dedicates this volume



Joseph Rudd

Dedication

JOSEPH RUDD—a name known well to every undergraduate—was born in New York City, March 28, 1868. In 1888 he came to Hamilton from the Berkley School of New York, entering here as a Junior with the class of '90, and becoming a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Theta Nu Epsilon fraternities. Entering Columbia Law School in the fall of 1890, Mr. Rudd completed the three-year course there in two years, passing his bar examinations in May, 1892. The following year saw him practising law in Utica, and three years later he became partner in the firm of Jones, Townsend & Rudd, while in 1913 he formed the present partnership of Rudd & Judson. He is now President of the Utica Valve and Fixture Company, Chairman of the executive committee of the firm of Hart & Crouse, director of several banks, as well as a member of numerous clubs in Utica and New York.

Acting in the capacity of Chairman of the Trustee Committee on Undergraduate Activities ever since elected to the Board in 1910, Mr. Rudd has served Hamilton, and especially the interests of the undergraduates, with heart and soul. With Dr. Stryker and Prof. William R. Terrett he shared the honor of being the first honorary members of Pentagon. It was "Rudd '90" who originated the Alumni Council which meets twice a year in Utica. It is "Rudd '90" who is always on hand at the meetings of the Student Executive Council. The remodeling of the old Soper Gymnasium was due to his efforts, and he is now at work securing a superior athletic field and improving the skating rink. It was "Rudd '90" again who originated and planned the week-end Commencement, and it is he who is at present working to make Commencement a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Intra-collegiate questions, those intimately concerning the undergraduates, are what have taken his time and thought, however. There is hardly an activity or a question of policy in which he had not "had a finger," to use his own expression. In working for the solution of College problems Mr. Rudd "tacks" in an entirely different direction from that followed by "hallowed precedent." To his credit be it said that he heartily believes in the common sense of the undergraduate body, in its ability to talk matters over informally, rationally, and come to a reasonable decision. "Set laws, rules, and regulations for student conduct, are fast proving themselves obsolete not only, but also quite ineffective in accomplishing their avowed purpose," are his sentiments. With a mind sharpened by contact with the business world and expanded by his wide intercourse among ambitious youths and men successful in the professions, he has been able to analyze the problems lying nearest us, the student body.

Athletics have been his pet. Not many college generations gone did football teams look eagerly towards a royal "set-up" from their loyal follower "Joe" Rudd, whose keen insight and direct advice gave more than one athlete a push here and a prod there. The problem of supporting three major teams at Hamilton, at a considerable financial loss, has not yet met with a satisfactory solution. Joseph Rudd aspires to see the day when athletics on the Hill have behind them a permanent endowment fund, by the aid of which spectators at intercollegiate contests will be forbidden to pay admission, when the student tax for undergraduate activities will have been a thing of history, when all traces of business will have been removed from the hands of managers and captains.

The HAMILTONIAN takes keen pleasure in dedicating this volume to such a true friend of all of us, to one whose close association with the college has become an invaluable asset. May "Rudd '90" live long and prosper.

"Chief" Myers, while an undergraduate at Springfield Y.M.C.A. College, proved himself an all-round athlete by participating in every branch of athletics with marked success. For three years he was star half-back on the 'varsity football team, while during his senior year he held a permanent job on the track team. For four years he was a member of every class team. He came to Hamilton very highly recommended for the position of Athletic Instructor, which position he held for two years at the Cleveland West High School. He is at present engrossed in coaching the Buff and Blue baseball nine thru a long and hard schedule.

COMMENCEMENT

1915

103rd Commencement, June, 1915

BUSTLE, stir, and racket were noticeably absent from the fair days of Commencement Week last June when the select group of 1915 possessed the Hill, strutted (ut aiunt) into the Chapel to go thru the time-honored motions of faring well to us all, to turn their backs on Carissima and pitch into the chaos and turbulence of the outer world too soon to become a hum-drum affair for most of them. There was a singularly impressive air hanging over the simple exercises, interrupted by the fitful bursts of merriment which accompany every "sad and solemn" occasion. Of the alumni who returned to renew acquaintances, and remind the "rest of us" of "when I was in college," representatives of the classes '85, '90, and 1910 were most in evidence.

The Prize Speaking Thursday afternoon, June 17, opened the program, the competition for honors being unusually close, with the underclassmen in the van, on merit. On Friday at 3 P.M. President McNair '15 led his troupe to the rostrum for a whimsical burlesque of the Faculty, while in the evening the Prize Debaters had the floor "For and Against National Prohibition."

During the final exercises Monday, President Stryker's announcement came: "In memory of James Schoolcraft Sherman '78, late Vice-President of the United States, a group of devoted friends established a new chair of Political Science with the sum of over $55,000. Hon. Lucius N. Littauer of Gloversville, who so long had served with Mr. Sherman in Congress, has the first place in this group."

1917 HAMILTONIAN

The presentation of the bronze bust of Hon. Elihu Root '64 on Alumni Day featured the whole occasion. Albert H. Pratt '01, as sponsor, did the honors: "Comparatively few people ever hear of the undergraduates' activities, but the fame of an alumnus may become international, and the name of his college will always be associated with him. . . . Hamilton's claim for eminence does not rest on her victorious teams, altho she has had not a few; but upon the type of man she has developed. . . . The tradition that four years at Hamilton produces the right kind of man is worth while preserving. . . . With this in mind we are about to establish a precedent which will deserve further development. Hamilton is to advance the idea that while the heroes of the past must not be forgot honor should be paid to those of the present. . . As a concrete reminder of what a Hamilton man has accomplished and may yet do again the alumni present to Hamilton College this bronze bust of Elihu Root by the sculptor Pietro."

Senior History

IT has been given to us, the men of Nineteen-Sixteen, to see Hamilton pass thru great changes. In minor ones we have aided, and in all we have sympathized. Soon we are to leave the home of four good years whose space looked long, while today we wonder whither the hours have flown.

In our leaving we make room for a throng of new men who are to enjoy the fruit of Kirkland's labor, as we have done. Next year, and the year after, and for years to come men will stand on the chapel steps and with bared heads will sing "Carissima" for the last time as undergraduates. We hope they will be better men than we. We want them to profit by our mistakes, but we want them to cherish the traditions which we received, the ideals which an army of noble men have carried to communities over all the land. Our life has been a happy one. Thru all we labored. As best we might we filled the gaps in college life. We have counted it a privilege to labor for Hamilton. But as freely as we have given we have received.

Today we look at the world. Tomorrow we shall look back at the college. For a time we expect that our habitation will be "a second floor back," nor will our bank roll be annoyingly large. We shall meet problems more difficult than "Brownie's Trig." But we will meet them with a strong heart as we have seen others do. When occasion offers we will return to recall "when I was in college." Kipling must have known the spell which binds us to the campus when he wrote

"Under their feet in the grasses
My clinging magic runs.
They shall return as strangers,
They shall return as sons."

Desmond St. Clair Little

THE class of 1917 was still very young when the first of its members was taken away. At the time of the Christmas vacation, freshman year, Desmond Little left college and never returned. For seven long months he fought bravely only to be drawn toward "The Valley of the Shadow of Death." Each slight improvement inspired him with new hope that he was at last on the road to health. One bright July day he died.

"Dem," as he was called by his friends was a quiet, unassuming fellow. His cheery greeting and happy smile won the hearts of all who came in contact with him.

He wasn't here long enough to establish very many firm friendships, but he had already sown the seed for some that gave promise of growing rapidly and bearing abundant fruit. He was a true and sincere friend. No greater tribute than this can be paid.

Junior History

THE fall of 1913 saw seventy-three freshmen march up the Hill. This was the class of 1917. Our numbers remained intact until we met the charge of the Faculty armed with that deadly weapon, mid-year exams. After this shock and loss, we went boldly on in blissful felicity during the verdant spring, and with unburdened minds met the second Faculty onslaught. Mortality was again high. Because of this guerilla warfare waged by the Faculty, matrimony (before which our Prex succumbed) and business, we have now only the super-excellence of our former multitudinous array.

In the common activities, rows, football, baseball, track and other such minor college functions, 1917 has held a worthy place. On all varsity teams we are represented. We have won the indoor track meet and the inter-class basketball pennant for two years. 1917 cannot be charged with lack of brawn, nor of brain either. To-day fewer members of '17 than any other class will be found with their names on the bulletin under the heading "Delinquents." Steady, consistent plugging, aided by our early losses, has accomplished this record. Further indications of the extraordinary cranial talent in our class are that we harbor in our midst a poet, and "Brick" and "Ernie."

But 1917 will not be famous for its many luminaries, but will be remembered as a class that worked together, every man with his shoulder to the wheel. We have come to feel that intangible something that binds our hearts to the Hill. We know the thrill that comes with a complete understanding of Hamilton lore. Our legacy is more than a century old and we strive to be worthy of it. With our ideals high and three years of achievement behind us, we "gay young juniors" look forward to the best year of our course as yet to come. The best year, we think, because it gives the most opportunities for us to help Hamilton. And that is ever our goal.

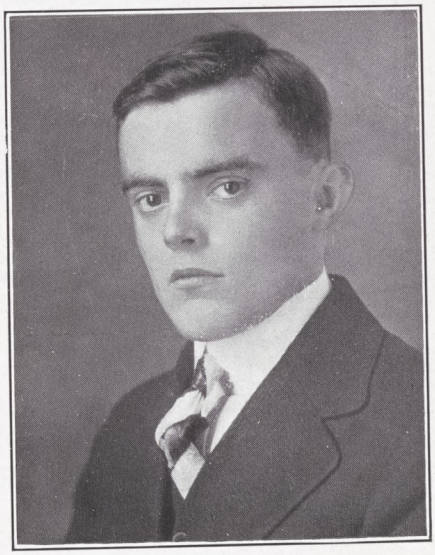
Sponge.
"Say, don't print anything about my grubbin' tobacco. That's a myth."
"And you ain't goin' to say nuthin' about my Rome girl, are you?"
Talks as if he had a chew of tobacco in his mouth.
Says his picture doesn't flatter him.
His own best scurf.
We've never forgiven Holy Cross.



GEORGE ELIOT NORTON, E.L.S.
Vernon Center

"Nap."
The little corporal.
Declares he's an upperclassman.
Dinq'd in D. Chase's Gym.
Can grow a beard.
Nestles under Bob Patterson's arm in Chapel.
"Cal's" conscientious debater.
Peculiar in that he always gets lost in the shuffle.

THOMAS LAZEAR ORR, ΣΦ
Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Queenie," "Tom."
"And then he danced;—
He danced, I say, right well."
As Bill says, he has the passion to tell.
Favorite expression: "I like 'em young."
Does exercises every morning with an eye to the future.
Remember the Freshmen Banquet?
Remember the Sophomore Banquet?
Remember the x x x x . . . .
Three chairs for T. L.

ROBERT LEET PATTERSON, XΨ
Shields, Pa.

"Bob," "Ghost."

Scorner of the hoi polloi.

Our militarist war correspondent.

Gained 35 lbs. at Plattsburgh.

"To Hell with the Pope."

Has stopped eating at Merz's (closed about sickness).

Always hated an argument, but loved D. Chase's Gym.

Friend of Frank Blake.

ISAAC STANTON PENDLETON, ΘΔX Oneonta

"Ike," "Count."

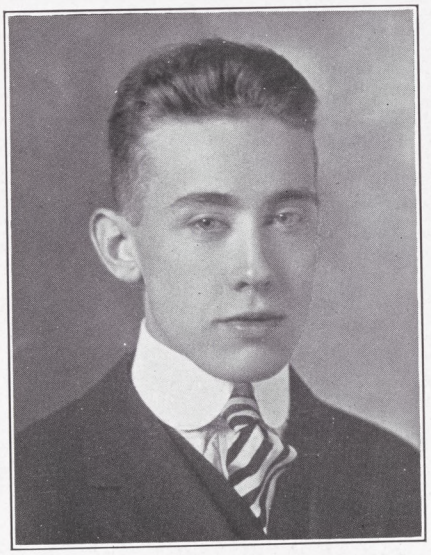
Pretty boy. Still living on Mellen's Food.

Writes decs. on the "Value of a College Education." Can now pick out a tune on the piano with one finger.

Wears his hair that way on purpose.

"I—er, beg pardon, sir, I'm not prepared, sir. I didn't know—er, I must have studied the wrong chapter."

Dan Luce's Teddy bear.



LELAND LAMONT POHL,
E.L.S. Vernon Center
"Lee Tockey."

Is so lazy that he takes a pillow with him to Hank Clark's Economics.

Lived two years on his brother's rep.

Roomed in the same room for three years because it was too much trouble to move.

Holds track records: shot, then lunch-put.

Used to sleep all afternoon in the blankets when out for Ass. Manager of Football.

STANLEY STEWART SAUNDERS,
ΔKE Clinton
"Brick," "Stew."

"Gosh, I haven't cracked a book." Then gets H. H.

One of those who don't like physics.

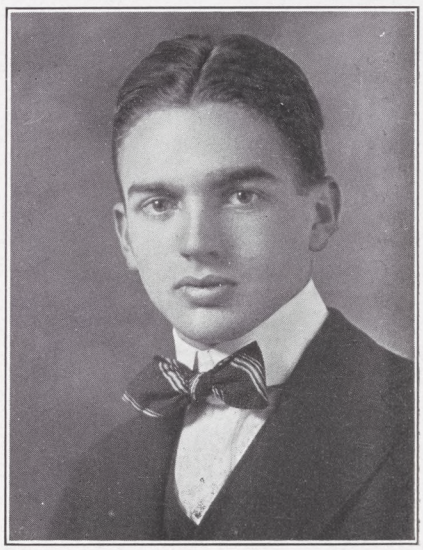
"I think it's a good course, but I'm sorry my dad teaches it."

Said that if all drinks tasted like beer he'd never drink. They don't.

Talks dreamily of Valeria, some wood-nymph from Queer Lake.

Chess unbeaten champion.

"Let's take a walk" (Brick's idea of a good time).



JAMES DANIEL SEAVER, ΨΥ
Brooklyn

"Jimes," "Germs."

Wants to be a Mormon.

Fussed himself into heart trouble Freshman year, believing in heart-to-heart talks with the girls.

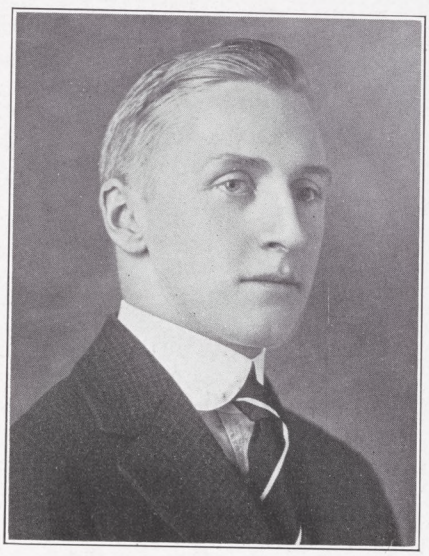
Now covers the field for the Utica Press.

The hardest man in the class to bring out of a trance.

Found while headed for Colgate. They won.

Originator of the Seaver Saunter.

Bones's main worry.



EDWIN BRUCE SHIELDS, ΨΥ
Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Bones," "Rat."

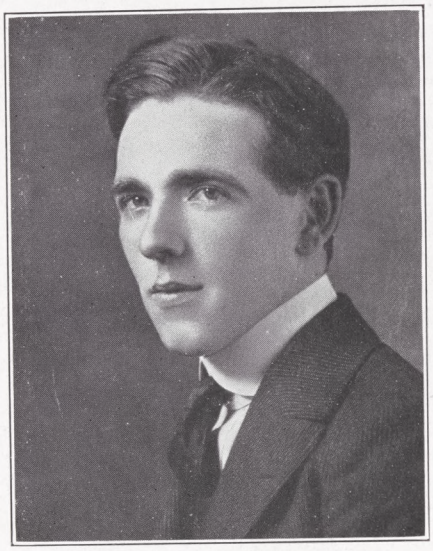
The hairless Mexican.

Shaves with an ink eraser.

Has the habit of flunking nine hours.

Bamboo hair on a head of bone,
Like Kipling's "hank of hair."
"Hello, my dear (on the telephone),
Are you there, my love, are you ther'eh?"

"Oh, cute, my sweet—wipe off the rust
And cut that Boston stuff.
Pull down your vest, put some beer in your chest,
You glib-tongued Pittsburgh ruf."



PETER SOTTONG
E. Orange, N. J.

"Pete"

The Jersey Mosquito.

"And the poor fool elected Anglo-Saxon."

"I say, cheese and crackers, give me a match, Cal."

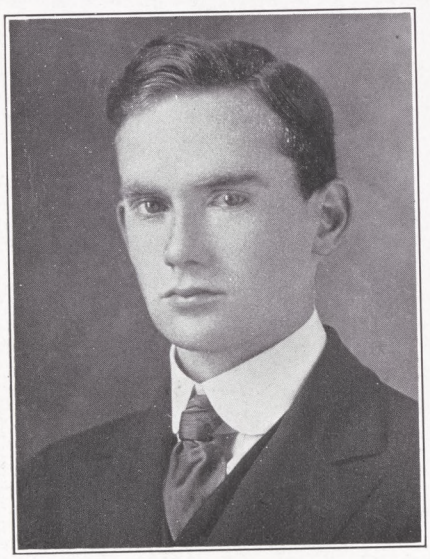
Our freckled-faced chimney. Fatimas' best ad.

Assistant grafter at the College Pawnshop.

Cal says that he debates like the Sphinx.

His face lost him more than one job.

But De la Fume on the banjo.



PAUL CHATHAM SQUIRES, ΔΥ
Clinton

"Paul," "Psy."

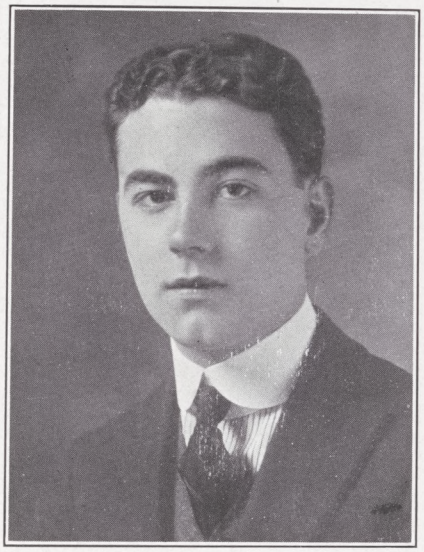
Infallible!

"Besides, he was a shrewd philosopher
And had read every text and glossover.
What e'er the crabbed'st author saith,
He understood b'implicit faith;
Whatever skeptic could inquire for,
For every why he had a wherefore."

1917 Mozart.

Proved that he could run, at the Freshmen Banquet.

Has a peculiar lady-like lisp developed from conversing with Schnitz's dog.



HOWARD GIBSON STACKHOUSE
ΣΦ Utica
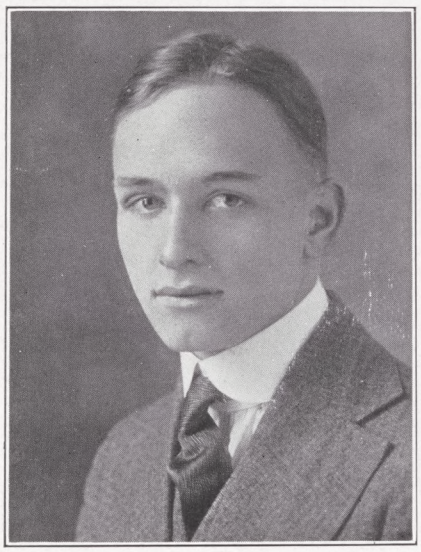
"Stack."
"There is no type of indolence like this."
Came to college wearing a checked suit, and imbued with that Utica atmosphere.
President of the "Rice Club."
Member of the Godiva Club—society for painless extraction of odd change according to the laws of chance (and the way George Flesh deals the cards).
"Well, I'll bump you. Let's watch the Jews go out."



JOHN ALLEN TALMADGE,
E.L.S. Morristown, N. J.
"Al."
The modern Minotaur.
Eats everything put in front of him.
"Tallmadge, can you translate that? I know the rest can."
Supes Supe by giving him the tenderloin at table.
His motto: Never leave till tomorrow what you can eat to-day.
Has the Gym. tank all to himself.
Rabbit-foot.
Awarded V. C. for teaching Freddie Williams how to swim.

CHAUNCEY SHAFFER TRUAX, ΣΦ New York

"Chanuce."

"God made him, therefore let him pass for a man."

Has never missed contributing to the "Spice o' Life" since sub-freshman year.

Argues on any question and never is wrong.

Coaches all his delegation thru the exams.

His face is somewhat similar to Vesuvii—vidite et credite.

All American Supe!

Frequently mistaken for Phil Jessup.

CLAYTON BAGSHAW WEED, ΨΥ Newburgh

"Clayt."

Before reading any further, please note the wicked look in his eye and the hungry corners of mouth.

Once seen in Utica, with a four-leaf clover.

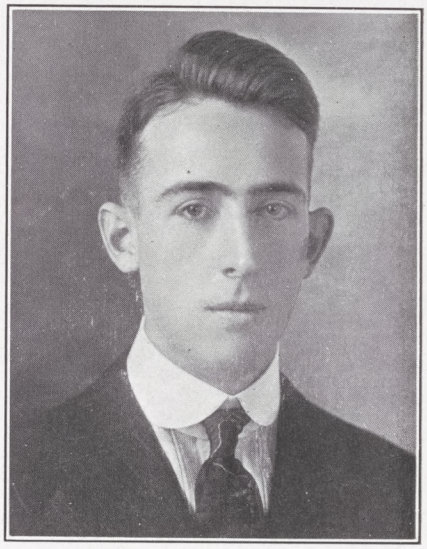
Woman is the tenor of his song.

Bagged a bird Sophomore year, and has sported wings for effect ever since.

Lover of humanity—specifically speaking.

Why girls leave home.

"Me and Les."



CLIFTON BION WHITMAN, ΔΥ
Groton

"Whit."

Often looks intelligent. Often stays awake in Pinkie.

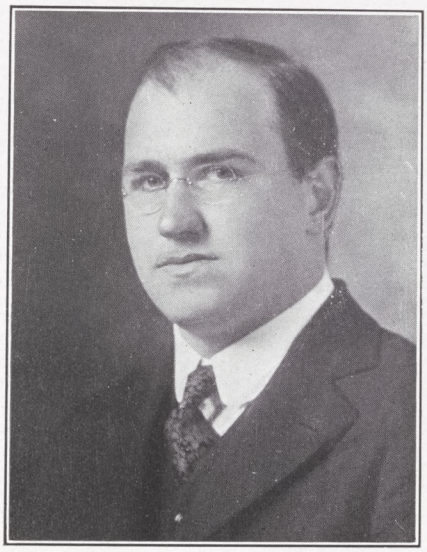
"Brush that fly off my nose, youre nearer to it than I am."

If his brain were in his nose he'd know something.

Billiken pitcher. The grin that won't come off.

When he sits down his fingers get tangled with his feet.

The hipless marvel—also legless. Gets around on his merits.



ADARIAH COTTER WOOLNOUGH
ΨΥ Ilion

"Addie.."

"Hail, hail, the gang's all here."

Used to fool around arms at Ilion. Now theorizes for Pink on "Wastes and How to Get Around Them."

Nose all about Utica.

Refused a drink once (at Mrs. Horace Seely's tea).

"Don't you think I know an ace of spades when I see one?"

"The Presbyterians, one of "whom I am which."

Gets sore only when Pete musses up his hair.

LESLIE WILLARD YULE, ΘΔX
Jordanville

"Curly."

Doesn't know that he is a Swede, and is proud of it.

Thinks that sitting in the electric chair is the nearest thing to Heaven.

As graceful as a ladder Freshman year.

Failed to grasp Rocks' "Hypothesis of the Wandering Pole."

Is going back on the farm after graduation.

Good joke on the Faculty.

CARLETON CLARK YOUNG,
ΑΔΦ Lincoln, Neb.

"Cy," "Siwash."

Stop! Look! Listen!

Our rangy Westerner with the pacificist argument.

Sixteen hours sleep before he had his face shot.

Heard swearing one Sunday after Chapel.

"One more like that and I'll declare you out."

Please translate it for us, Cy.

We can't name the species, but will give a dollar to any one who can ride him bareback for three minutes.

For Those Who Take Pills

I've always known my head was dense,
I've never been a shark,
I've never got a recompense
From Saunders or Pink Clark.

In Junior year I first began
To study Physics' laws
I'd fain employ profanity,
But here I'd better pause.

Now Pills's lectures are as clear
As London in a fog;
He revels in an atmosphere
Of Stygian monologue.

He holds his chalk up to his lips,
He dwells upon each word;
His Adam's apple bobs and dips
In arguments quite blurred.

The stuff he throws at us each day
Goes whizzing by our brains,
We sit and gape, and gape and sit
'S if we were bound in chains.

But why I can't quite see a light
When on and on he talks,
I lay to my own density
As do the other gawks.

SOPHOMORES

Sophomore History

ON our Coat of Arms you see Originality rampant on a Field vert. Around the Field runs our motto—that classic yell—"Ktaomai tee ethelo, hen ennea, hen okto." There you have Us.

Many new Customs owe their Birth to our Originality. With great Solicitude for the Freshmen, lest they should be Lost when their Verdancy mingled with the Greensward, we kept them off the Grass. Our ruling Trait forbids Mention of the many Victories we gained over the Slimy New-comers; for all Histories are filled with such. If you know the Names of the Rows and interclass Games, you know our Triumphs. Societyward, we instituted the Sophomore "The Dansant," an occasion unique in the History of Hamilton, and of equal importance with the Laying of the Corner Stone and the Placing of Lights on the Campus. To us is due the Honor of Establishing the "Welcoming," or "Reception," another social Affair which takes Place upon the Return of Rival Banqueters. In attempting to imitate our worthy Example, the Freshman Class shivered together while a bare Dozen "Originals" paraded the Campus in the Wee Small Hours. Calmly we strolled in front of the Windows where the Slimers anxiously watched us parade down the Hill on the Way to our Banquet. Once, once, the Freshmen were not green; that was when we rolled them in the Mud of Steuben Field, and walked nonchalantly over them to the Goal Line.

What college Activity wouldn't miss us badly if we all suddenly left? We play Football, Baseball and Mandolins; we Run, we Jump, we Sing, we Write; we do Everything, even Study; for Note that we lost only One (1) Man at our first Mid-years.

Don't you admit our Originality? Prex does. As a token of his Appreciation of it he gave us a week's Vacation from Chapel, and let the Slimers out too, to celebrate.

Of Course we could not in the Space allowed us write down All that we have done. So we won't.

FRESHMEN

1917 HAMILTONIAN

Freshman History

YES, we did slip one over on the college, when after the the January Examinations, we all decided that we liked the Hill well enough to stay until June at least. The majority of us were fairly sure about staying from the very first, but a few of our number didn't decide until the last moment. All this was a great surprise to the upper classmen and, we hope, gratifying. As for the Faculty, they realized that with nineteen-nineteen, a new age was beginning for Hamilton. Hamilton's scholastic standing has always been high and alas all too high for some of our predecessors, but we seemed to hit the stride the first time we entered the Chapel at the crude encouragement of the Rusty Sophomores. That very same night, we showed that we had some pep even tho at a disadvantage on account of our numbers, and that we all could paint, especially well with red paint, but owing to the darkness of the night we could not keep from getting mixed with the paint ourselves.

The morning that College opened, we spent some time sliding about the gravel paths before chapel, strangely mixed up with the ever-present Sophomores, who were trying to be real rough. After the regular work began, we spent many of our spare hours entertaining the upperclassmen with songs and dances, or occasionally taking refreshing plunges in the pool, after everyone else was safe in bed. Later on, we became industrially inclined and plans were made for raking the campus. The Sophomores showed the true fatherly spirit and offered to furnish us with rakes. Some accepted their offers but others, fearing that Bursar Coughlin's supply would not hold out, journeyed to Clinton and bought new rakes. I can't just remember what was the cause, but we never used the rakes.

Of course we had our Banquet, but it is perhaps the best policy not to say very much about this affair on account of the other banquet last fall. We don't make any pretense about the size of our class but we maintain with Prex that it is quality and not quantity that counts.

Football Retrospect

"Pete"

The football season of 1915 will always be pointed to with a great deal of pride, not only by every member of the squad, but also by every undergraduate of Hamilton. One defeat is all that can be chalked up against the team, and that one defeat showed something that few other Hamilton teams of recent years have possessed—"a comeback." Due to this fighting spirit which prevailed last fall, the season proved highly successful.

Our first game was disappointing, but its results were far-reaching. We defeated Clarkson Tech, but we allowed them to score on us. This same score removed what little conceit the team had acquired. The next week, on a sloppy field, the team earned a deserved victory over St. Stephen's. The N.Y.U. game was disappointing in that we allowed them to run up such an undeserved score—but in the second half the Buff and Blue "came back" with two touchdowns.

At Troy the team had an easy time of it, rolling up 26 points against R.P.I., and the very next week was held to a scoreless tie by Hobart. To their credit be it said that the visitors outplayed us. At Canton Captain Pope's cohorts revenged themselves on St. Lawrence, much to her chagrin, she having prepared a coffin for Hamilton's corpse. For the first time in seven years Hamilton conquered Rochester in a well-fought game. The men were just beginning to find themselves when they faced a heavier—and as equally successful eleven—Union. The game was thrilly, a battle royal, and the 0-0 score indicated very poorly the relative merits of the two teams. Suffice to say —Union thought to beat us. "Tough luck."

Well-earned praise goes to Captain Pope for his whole-hearted leadership. He proved himself an excellent captain as well as an untiring worker. Coach "Pete" Reynolds also deserves the greatest credit for his hard work and inimitable judgment. The squad, not unusual in size or merit, put a rugged determination into its work—and in return was rewarded by leaving a record the best of recent years.

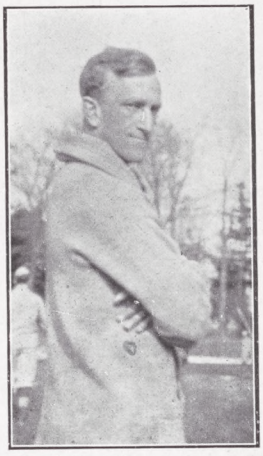
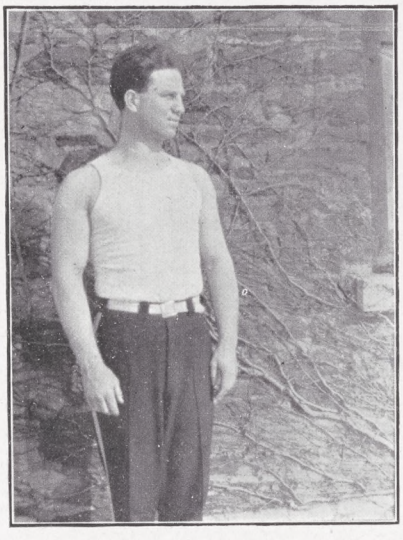
Baseball—A Review and An Outlook



Coach Toerner

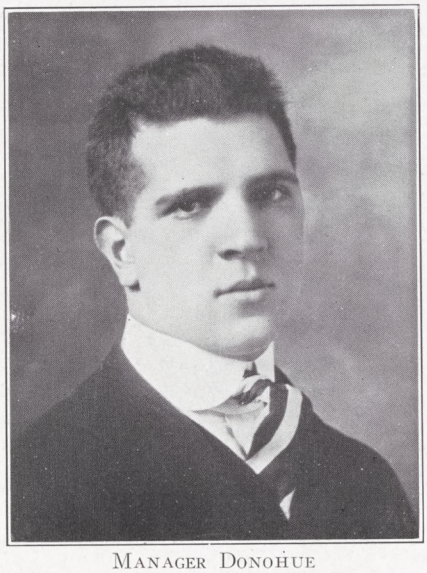
Every college suffers a relapse in its athletic achievements every once in a while; and ours seemed to have been in baseball last year. The season was decidedly unsuccessful. Last year when the first call for candidates was issued it seemed as if the college was justified in looking forward to capturing the N.Y.S.I.A.U. pennant. The team, with the exception of "Steve" Royce, was virtually the identical one that had held the premier honors of the league for two successive years. Of course, Hamilton knew the prowess of the 1914 captain, but we failed to realize how dependent upon him we had become. But enough of post-mortems. The team tried hard enough to win but they seemed to lack the "punch" at the crucial moment, a not unusual characteristic of losing teams.

The two games played during the Easter recess were both disappointing and disheartening. New York University with two less hits and six less errors defeated the team by the score of 5-2. The game with Lehigh at South Bethlehem was even more disastrous: 13-4. The Syracuse game was the worst of the season. However, this 12-0 defeat seemed to be the turning-point, for now the season began to assume a less gloomy aspect. Rochester nosed out on the better side of a 2-3 score. Colgate also took advantage of the now thoroughly disheartened team and won a listless game with the score of 6-3. At Schenectady, the old fighting spirit came to the fore, and although Union finally won, it was only accomplished after ten innings of hard fought baseball. The brightest spot of the year came the next week when Union was beaten after thirteen innings, 2-3. Middlebury won in the eleventh inning when Swartz "blew up" after pitching an otherwise good game. Rutgers won, 6-2, and the season closed with a "shut-out" by Colgate, 7-0.



CHIEF MYERS

CAPTAIN MILLER



MANAGER DONOHUE

There are some excuses for this poor showing, the principal one being the loss of players through low scholastic standing. Furthermore, the team was handicapped by having to play most of their games away, and, when they did play at home, it was upon a half-completed diamond. However, it is sincerely hoped that there will not be another season similar to this one. In spite of all these discouragements, Captain Erhardt was always inspiring his team by his own example of cheerful hard-work. He was heart and soul behind the team, encouraging the men to do their best, and the college felt that it was through no fault of his that the results were not better.

As to this season, we can not prophesy much. The team has lost but one man, yet, as last year has so conclusively proved, it is all guess-work. Captain Miller will be the mainstay of his own team as he has always been. He is a hard worker, a good baseball player, and full of the proper kind of fighting spirit. His enthusiasm is contagious, and we sincerely hope that it will lose none of its fervor. As to the individuals of the team we presume that they will be similar to last year. The infield should have improved from last year's experience and should be able to compete favorably with any of our opponents. As to new material in the freshman class, nothing definite has been ascertained, but we expect that they, too, will furnish their usual quota. In short, we expect that the season of 1916 will be a successful one.

1917 HAMILTONIAN

Track

THE 1915 track season was mediocre. It was by no means a failure, but sorely disappointing. Handicapped from almost the start thru the loss of Captain Lee, our biggest point-winner, the team was naturally discouraged during the season.

The innovation of sending a relay team to the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival started the season earlier than usual. At Philadelphia the Buff and Blue representatives did as well as was expected, the only disappointment being that after leading the race for three laps, Hamilton was forced to take fifth place. The local alumni displayed genuine loyalty in their hearty welcome and support.

The fate of the team was sealed at the Interclass Meet when Captain "Fritz" Lee pulled a tendon while running the hundred, which disabled him and the team for the rest of the season. Nevertheless the cinder trotters kept plugging away every afternoon under the able direction of Coach Risley, and easily whitewashed Rochester on Steuben Field one week later, the final score standing 78-39. The N.Y.S.I.A.U. Meet in Utica proved most disastrous for the Buff and Blue. Banks's tie for first in the high jump was the only event in which Hamilton came to the fore, the final reckoning putting us in third place. Praise goes to Manager Thorne for his management of the Utica Meet, the first "Intercollegiates" under Hamilton's auspices.

This year the season starts again with the Penn Relays, and a more satisfactory result is looked for, despite the loss of Gilbert and Squires, who ran last year. Captain Nichols and "Bones" Shields are running at top form at present writing, and are expected to star at Franklin Field April 29. The loss of Lee and Potter in the dashes and Higbie in the hurdles is keenly felt, but Coach Risley's optimism after looking over the material displayed in the Interclass Indoor Meet augurs well for an excellent showing during May.

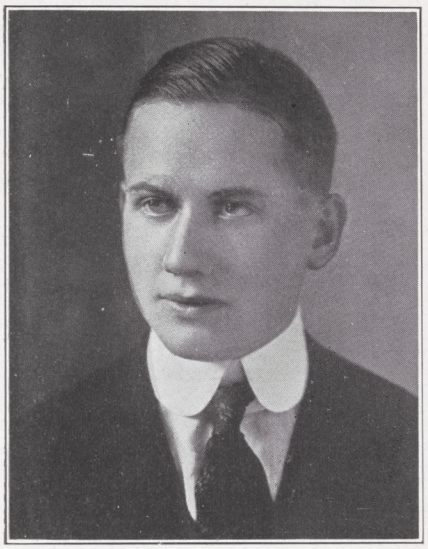
THE FACULTY SPORTS

Intramural Sports

Director: CHAUNCEY S. TRUAX, '17.



MANAGER TRUAX

The Soper Gymnasium during the past season has been the scene of the most lively interfraternity and interclass contests which the Intramural Department has conducted in recent years. Interest was centered on the Interfraternity Basketball Series as usual, but the interclass games and the Interclass Meet were the highlights in the year's history, bringing out large crowds of rooters, including many of the faculty. The season opened with the fall tennis tournament, in which Groves carried away the laurels from a large field. At present writing the Sophomores have just carried the day, or rather the night, in the annual Indoor Interclass Meet, although odds, before the first number on the program was run off, were in favor of the Juniors, for two years the champions of the college. 1918 won because of their numerical strength and enthusiasm in entering every event on the list, while the Juniors were content to let four or five of their best men do all the work. Shields proved high point winner, while Nichols and Banks broke the 440-yard and high jump records respectively.

The basketball cup went to the Dekes, who came thru the hardest season in years with a clean slate, defeating eight teams in a row with very little difficulty, the hardest fights being put up by the Delta U's and the Alpha Delts, both former champions. The advent of the Neutrals into the series set an excellent precedent for future seasons, and the men who represented the neutral body in college are greatly to be praised for their hard work in bucking teams which had worked together last year.

In the Interfraternity Track Meet the Dekes were again the victors with an average of 57.1, and again they were closely followed by the Delta U's with an average of 56.8, and the Alpha Delts with 55.8. Nichols, '16, made the highest individual score of the evening, totaling 498 points.

The matches for the class championship of the college was watched with more interest than any other single event on Director Truax's program, with the three upper classes pulling almost equally strong as far as individual merit went. The pennant finally went to the Juniors, who "copped" it last year.

1917 can boast of a team with a proud record. The champion quintet—W. E. Donohue, Pendleton, Brockway, J. C. Donoghue, and Behan—have played together for two years, both on and off the Hill. This winter they traveled around to five towns in this vicinity, including Clinton, and won three of the matches. When Sophomores the 1917 contingent had six games on their schedule, establishing a precedent for underclass teams which ought to and undoubtedly will be continued.

Musical Clubs' History

THE high reputation which the Hamilton Musical Clubs have built up in the past few years mounted still higher this year under the leadership of Banks and Ogilvie, combined with the management of J. Cyril Donoghue. More enthusiasm, more songs, more stunts, more finished harmony, and more public appearances, not to mention the longest trip in the history of the organizations, made the season the most successful in the memory of the present college generation.

The initial concert during Prom Week, although rather rough in spots, showed wonderful possibilities which were realized later in the season. The guests present forced the men to the end of their repertoire, and Prex said that "it was the best concert which I have heard in years." Enough praise for any club. One hitch marred the performance. While "Clayt" Weed was singing his solos, his insistent wig-wagging to "Miss Marys" diverted "Addie" Woolnough's concentrative mind from the piano, which immediately annoyed the soloist and caused an uncomfortable pause. Some of the girls, however, "'low as how it was all fake." The Calliope Quartet pulled some rags out of their instruments at a great pace, following the time set by Senor Ogilvie's nods, while "Geoff" himself outdid himself in his specialty stunt with the Hawaian guitar.

Clinton, Syracuse, Oneida, and Rome held the card thru March and early April, serving to polish off the roughness before the culminating event of the season, the Easter trip. Thirty-one men appearing in nine concerts in a 1,500-mile circuit tell the story of the "best ever." A concert in Utica for May 8 is expected to finish up the season, at present writing.

GUILFORD, N. Y., POSTER

The Glee Quartet, touring around the State, under the management of Williams, '08, gave nine concerts in nearby towns, and made a reputation for themselves that by the time they reached Guilford, N. Y., they were hailed as "The Famous Hamilton College Five" (which included "That Prince of Entertainers, Mr. William N. Robson, in monologue.") Weed, first tenor, Calkins, second tenor, Lewis, first bass, and Woolnough, second bass, had a way all their own of captivating their audiences, and were always forced to the limit in encores. Lewis appeared in monologue, and Calkins gave an Ukelele solo at the Norwich concert.

This was the first season that the Quartet traveled as an independent organization.

CHARLATANS

FULLER '19

"Officer 666"

By Augustin MacHugh

PRESENTED BY "THE CHARLATANS"

Monday Afternoon, January Thirty-first, at the New Century Aunitorium, Utica, 2:15 o'clock

THE CAST :

Travers Gladwin	William N. Robson, '16
Whitney Barnes, his friend	Louis J. Baumer, '17
Bateato, Gladwin's Jap valet	George R. Chester, '19
Police Officer Michael Phelan, No. 666	George S. McMillan, '16
Helen Burton	Harold S. Dodge, '18
Sadie Burton, Helen's cousin	Frederic G. Yeandle, '18
Mrs. Burton, their aunt	Dean M. Fuller, '19
Alfred Wilson, a picture thief	Harold A. Banks, '16
Captain Stone of the New York police	Louis N. Brockway, '17
Kearney, a detective	J. Cyril Donoghue, '17
Watkins, Gladwin's ex-butler	Philip C. Jessup, '18
Ryan, a police sergeant	Philip C. Jessup, '18

Policemen.

The play is in three acts and the entire action takes place in the drawing room of the Gladwin mansion on Fifth Avenue, New York City, from five o'clock in the afternoon until two o'clock the next morning. It is early winter, and the time is the present.

The Charlatans

President Robson

The Charlatans of 1916 gave four performances of "Officer 666" to very good audiences. As usual, the first production was given on the opening day of Prom, January 31st, at the New Century Auditorium. The audience was large and appreciative. The presentation was exceptionally good and was a great success. The next engagement was at Seneca Falls on March 2nd. Then followed the second Utica performance at the New Century Auditorium, March 6th, under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association. The fourth performance was given at Ilion, May 3d. The play was well received at every performance.

The cast of "Officer 666" was well suited to the play. President Robson, '16, made a splendid New York millionaire under the name of Travers Gladwin. George S. MacMillan, '16, in the title role, was a very amusing "cop." Harold A. Banks, '16, played to perfection the part of the gentleman burglar. Louis J. Baumer, '17, put lots of English on the role of Whitney Barnes. Harold S. Dodge, '18, made a pleasing Helen Burton. His acting of this difficult feminine part received remarkable comment. Frederic G. Yeandle, '18, as Sadie Small, and Dean M. Fuller, '19, as Mrs. Burton, deserve equal praise. George R. Chester, Jr., '19, as Bateato, was a typical Jap valet.

The farce proved a splendid vehicle for the Charlatans. Its numerous amusing situations were excellently interpreted. The cast caught the spirit of the comedy and showed true dramatic talent.

1917 HAMILTONIAN

Manager Henty

Heretofore the Charlatans has been a loosely organized club whose membership changed from year to year. For some time the need had been felt of forming a lasting organization. Accordingly, the present members met at the D.U. house on February 24th and formed a permanent club. Professors Shepard, Chase and Ristine were elected honorary charter members. The officers were made a committee to draw up a constitution. At a later date a custodian will be chosen to take care of the properties.

The new organization will cause no change in the competition for places on the cast. No preference will be shown to members of the club. To become a permanent member of the club a man must have a sufficiently important part to show his ability as an actor. The manager and assistant manager will be elected by the College as at present and will be ex-officio members of the club.

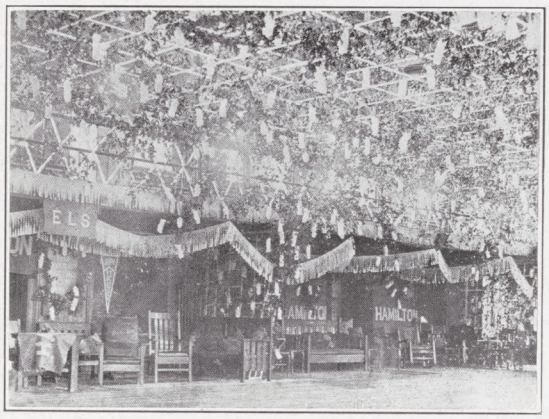
The Prom



The orchestra struck easily into "Auf Wiedersehen." All around the fairy-like gym the couples were aroused from their lethargy by the thought that this was the last dance, their last chance, with the partners from whom they must part too soon. The patronesses rearranged themselves, ceased their conversation, and bent their eyes upon the dancers.

The lights vanished. Colored lights flared forth, ever-changing, darting here and there, now upon this couple, now upon that. The face of a neighbor showed pale and green one moment, red and flushed the next, while the soft swish of skirts and the sound of slippers gliding over the shiny floor added music to the strain. The dancers seemed to glide without effort, engrossed with their partners, whispering and thinking, lamenting that this was the end of the most wonderful time of all—the end of Prom. The music ceased; the dancers stopped. The lights went up. The patronesses arose. They seemed rather impatient. There was a crowding towards the stairs, a bustle of departure, but a dreamy look in the eyes of everyone.

The committee succeeded in their purpose of making the Prom of 1917 the most delightful climax to the wonderful mid-winter festivities. Weed, Chairman, and Dayton, Treasurer, deserve lauding for the smoothness with which things literally ran themselves. Their endeavors were the cause of an enjoyment different from any other, while their creation was a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Work

President Gardner

The Christian Association during the past year has probably gone farther toward attaining its ideals than ever before. In the year's work some new methods developed, both in carrying on the movements started in former years and in the new work. A particular emphasis was put upon the Christian work on the Hill, the evangelistic campaign being the climax.

The customary receptions were held, one for the sub-freshmen in the spring and the other for the entering freshmen at the beginning of the college year in September. The Northfield delegation was as large as usual, and at several other conferences Hamilton was well represented. In the fall a Bible class under the leadership of Professor Ibbotson was formed and meetings were held throughout the entire year. The course of study for this past year was "The Prophets of the Old Testament." Shortly after the opening of the second term, a class for the Freshmen was started under the leadership of Prof. Marsh, and also a larger Mission study group under Dr. Wood for the three upper classes. On Wednesday evenings throughout the year, prayer meetings were held in Silliman Hall.

On Sunday afternoons, immediately after Chapel, the College was given the opportunity of listening to men from different walks of life. Among the speakers this year were Dr. Reed of Auburn Seminary; Dr. Geo. Black Stewart, President of Auburn Seminary; Mr. Fitch, Editor of the "Survey"; and Mr. Miller of the Internation Y.M.C.A. committee. There were also two delegations of students from Auburn Seminary who spoke in Silliman Hall, one last spring and the other last winter. During the early part of the year were heard occasional speakers, among whom were members of the Faculty, Rev. Mr. Soper of Clinton, Connell, '12, and Drummond, '01. On alternate Sunday afternoons different undergraduates gave short talks in the meetings.

The evangelistic campaign in February was the first of its kind ever attempted on the Hill. It opened Monday, February 14, and continued until Friday evening. Meetings were held every afternoon and evening. The evening meetings consisted of a series of addresses by Dr. Joseph Wilson Cochran of Philadelphia, one of America's foremost clergymen. The afternoon meetings, devoted to problems which puzzle college men, were conducted by Rev. R. R. Wicks, '04. Rev. Alexander Thompson, '06, and Clancy Connell, '12, assisted in the work. The campaign was not expected to and did not show any great immediate results, yet later events have shown that the campaign accomplished some very decided benefits.

In addition to the intensive work, the Sunday schools of Clinton and the vicinity have had the aid of college men, while the Sunday school at England was maintained entirely by the Association.

The Pioneer movement started by Griffith, '17, has had the aid of the Y.M.C.A., and through it the support of the college body. Nearly a third of the undergraduate body has been engaged in some sort of work with the grammar school boys of Clinton and Utica.

During the Christmas vacation, three men, Bergner, '16, Muir, '17, and Beach, '18, held a series of revival meetings in Dolgeville. The meetings were well attended and were a success in every way. As a result of this series of talks, an invitation was extended to these men to conduct a revival campaign in Mexico, N. Y., during the Easter vacation.

There is a great deal of praise due President Gardner and his cabinet for the success of the work this past year. With such a season as an example, the opportunity for success in future years is great. Conditions now are ripe for some telling work for better Christian conditions in Hamilton. May all success attend the Y.M.C.A.

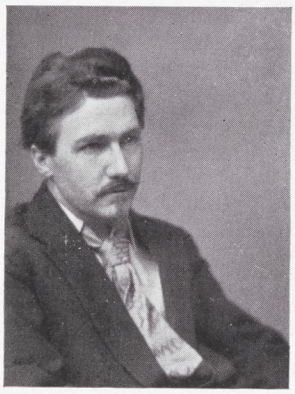
Ezra Pound, '05



Did you ever hear of the "Imagist" poets? If not, it is about time you learned of them, for they are the newest thing out. They are the most modern writers of verse and their number is constantly increasing. Among them, the leader of them, is a Hamilton man, Ezra Pound, '05, now Professor of Poetry at the University of London. Even as far back as 1909 readers at the Boston Athenæum were inquiring eagerly for his works. Now he is one of the most talked of modern poets. Among the Imagists, Wyndham Lewis, editor of Blast, rates Pound as the heighest point of American art. Carl Sandburg says of him, "If I were driven to name one individual who, in the English language, by means of his own example of creative art in poetry has done most of living men to incite new impulses in poetry, the chances are I would name Ezra Pound."

Of course Ezra Pound is new and strange. We have to put thought into the reading of his poems before we learn from him. Then we find that he has about him the informing breath of all literature which lives. There is opposition to his work. Some assert that such matters have never appeared before, others that his poetry cannot be analyzed. Perhaps he prints too much, but at any rate he has served to stir up agitation among modern poets which cannot help but react for the good of their work. Some cannot see the kind of beauty which crops out in lines like

"And the beauty of this thy Venice hast thou shown unto me
Until is its loveliness become unto me a thing of tears."

At other times, Pound gathers a whole world of sense into a single quatrain. "Ancient Wisdom" shows the effect of his Chinese study.

"So-Shu dreamed,
And having dreamed that he was a bird, a bee, a butterfly,
He was uncertain why he should try to feel like anything else.
Hence his contentment."

Sometimes three lines tell the story, as "Li Po," characterized as a steel net of impeccable technique.

"And Li Po also died drunk.
He tried to embrace a moon
In the yellow river."

Perhaps Pound is not appreciated. In a world with so high a proportion of fools it is not a disgrace to have one's work misunderstood. But a poet who can write a Christ poem like "The Ballad of the Goodly Fere," pronounced by William Butler Yeats "one of the few out of thousands of Christ poems that will live on, shining with the luminous power of the Christ Life," shows an inspiration which some day will bring the world to a realization of its true value, and another Hamilton son will bring glory to his Alma Mater.

The following is an extract from a letter to the HAMILTONIAN:

5 Holland Place Chambers,
Kensington, London W., England,
Jan. 26, 1916.

Dear Sir:—

You ask for a brief summary of my "life and work" since leaving Hamilton.

I have mostly traveled and written books, making the latter as unpopular as possible through a general detestation of human imbecility and a great love for the very few intelligent persons incarcerated on this planet.

I suffered some post-graduate work rather badly. I taught for four months in the most abandoned gehenna of the emasculated stripe of our States. I escaped to Spain, Gibraltar, Venice. Since when I have abided chiefly in the metropolis, with occasional springs in the south (North Italy, Aquitaine).

The list of my published works is as follows:

Poems: "Personæ," 1909 (London); "Exultations," 1909 (autumn), (London); "Provenca," 1910 (Boston); "Canzoni," 1911 (London); "Ripostes," 1912 (London).

Translations: "The Sonnets and Ballate of Guido Cavalcanti" (Boston and London, 1912); "Cathay" (containing Chinese poems mostly by Rihaku, from the notes of the late Ernest Fenollosa), (London, 1915).

Prose: "The Spirit of Romance" (an attempt somewhat to define the charm of the mediæval poetry of Latin Europe), (London, 1910); "Gaudier-Brzeska" (a memoir of the sculptor), (London, 1916).

Anthologies edited: "Des Imagistes" (New York and London, 1914 and 1915); "Catholic Anthology" (London, 1915).

More voluminous prose articles: "Troubadours" (Quarterly Review, 1913); "The Classical Plays of Japan" (Quarterly Review, 1914); further work on the same, "Drama" (1915); introduction to the collected poems of Lionel Johnson (for the English edition exclusively), (1915); "Remy de Gourmont" (Fortnightly Review, 1915); several series of articles for the New Age.

Besides this I have been and am engaged in editing of Ernest Fenollosa's papers on Japan and China. The importance of Fenollosa and his work is scarcely to be overestimated.

For the rest I have had something to do with the building up of Poetry, Blast and The Egoist (this last intermittently).

I have done what I could to clear off the pestilential stupidity left hanging in the air when the Victorians and American 1860-ers died off and their private secretaries, females, pandars and typists took over the guardianship of what they supposed to be literature and the general supervision of what should be printed in English.

I have known a reasonable number of the intelligent men now living—writers, painters and sculptors.

I have had some share in clearing the mush out of our verse-writing, and in insisting on the recognition of the more intrepid and inventive among our artists.

(Signed) EZRA POUND, '05.

Bums, Bluffers, Sleep-walker, Spongers, and der andere Gow—The Class.

First Affirmative, Waslos O'Kyllme:

Honorable Chairman, Worthy Opponents, Gentlemen and Banks: The subject for debate this morning is: For and against the Henry Ford peace expedition. We have divided our noble subject into two main issues—firstly, that peace is necessary, and secondly and finally, that the expedition is morally correct. I will prove to you that peace is necessary and my colleague will try to prove to you that it is morally correct. We must look thoroly into this history of this very important question. I must first give you some painful information. The leading countries of Europe are at war. Just think of it, actually killing one another! At the present rate of killing 2,500 men per day we find that dividing this number into the area multiplied by the population, adding ten per cent for birthrate and three-fourths of one per cent for war babies that in 22 years, 7 months, 3 weeks, 2 days, 55 minutes, and 3.99999045 seconds we will only have two and one-half men left in Europe. Henery, realizing this lamentable state of affairs, got the gang together and sailed over the pond to coax the boys out of the trenches. Many wireless messages were sent to the boys offering them each a Model T if they climbed out of the———

First Negative, Millen McFillum:

Mr. Loose, Gents: We divided our side into seventeen main issues. Mine is the first. My pard didn't have much dope so I gave him the last sixteen. As I was saying, my issue is: Resolved, That the Ford trip was foolish. Any man that would ask Windjammer Bryan to go with him must be nuts. The whole bunch on the trip were just looking for something soft and they got it. One woman took her six children with her to argue for peace. Woman's place is in the home. These women nowadays are—— (Sharp rapping on the chairman's desk. "Mr. McFillum, we are not debating Suffrage.") (Millen, continuing) Well, then, I will jump from the horns of that dilemma back to the tertium quid. Also there were some squirrels on board. With this picked cargo of nuts there must have been plenty of squirrel food anyhow. And the———

Second Affirmative, Byle Jitneys:

Most Noble Chairman, and Gang: I will show you that this expedition is good morally. Let me draw you a picture. Come with me to the desolate homestead in the war zone. Picture the poor, poor old mother with seven small children to support, digging in the ground for a few worms for their evening meal. Her tears form rivulets winding down the valleys over mountains and plains only to be lost in the sea. No more will the old homestead be fragrant with Lucky Strike from brother Willie's corncob pipe; no longer will the dying ember sizzle from the well-aimed tobacco juice shot from between Uncle Charlie's front molars; never again will Father's heavies adorn the family clothes-line on Mondays; never again will grandpa stagger home from the lodge meeting in the small hours; never again—— But let us draw a curtain over this heart-rending scene. The menfolks are all cannonfood. We see the ethical and moral view forced upon us by this little portrait. Of all the wars since Adam they have ended in peace. Why not end this one thus and avoid breaking the rule thus established? Let us end it by Xmas, says Henry.

Chairman: Mr. Eells, please take your feet down, and let some light in the room. Wake Knapp up, he is snoring too loud.

Second Negative, Ratty Ratoon:

Presiding Ossifer, and Gentlemen: To stop the war at the present time would be a crime. Our ammunition factories are just beginning to make money. This peace would greatly endanger the financial position of this our country. It would be disasterous to the whole world to stop the war now. Suppose Washington had made peace after the winter in Valley Forge. Where would the United States be today, gentlemen? Suppose that the Roundheads had climbed out of the trenches before the war was over. Where would England stand today? The worst disaster that can befall a country is to stop its war too early. What great good has H. Ford done for the world. He has filled the byways and highways full of roadlice, and made walking a pleasure. This is not enough to warrant him to make peace for the warring nations. War is a pleasure compared with riding in one of his flivvers. No wonder the boys wouldn't leave the trenches. Would you leave a nice warm comfortable trench to get jounced around in a Ford?

REBUTTAL

First Negative, Millen McFillum:

Mr. Chairman and Bums: I have looked up the three thousand five hundred and ninety-three wars and surprising to relate they have all ended in peace. I am forced to admit the strength of the affirmative's arguments on this point. Germany does not want peace. I have the undeniable authority of Baron Heinrich von Danielz and Count Karl Ratzkeller Baumerhaus on this question. I maintain that the personnel of the Oscar II was not representative of America's foremost citizens. If I had been on board there would——

First Affirmative, Waslos O'Kyllme:

Mr. Judge and Mob: Let me read to you a wireless I have just received. (Reads) "Mr. Waslos O'Killme, Ham. Female Coll.—Dear Fat: Enclosed find one iron cross. I am heartily in favor of H. Ford's peace expedition. Gott mit uns. (Signed) Bill Hollenzollern." This is absolute proof that the expedition is necessary. I would like to correct our worthy opponent of the second negative. I quote Senor Ralfito Supereno when I say that trenches were not used by the Roundheads but were only invented a short time ago. The overhead sewer system in our quadrangle bears mute testimony in the history of the trench as invented by that illustrious and well-known genius, Brick Blake.

Chairman (interrupting): Mr. Peck, cease waving your ears, you are causing a vicious draught.

Second Negative, Ratty Ratoon:

Chairman and Men: I wish to refute the argument of the first speaker on the affirmative. He quoted some statistics about the length of the war and his seconds were wrong. Instead of 3.99999045 it should be 4.99999045 seconds. This was careless in the extreme and I think that I should have won that Math medal that adorns his chest. I shall recommend to the faculty that they demand the return of it. It is dangerous for the college to let such things happen. The second speaker on the affirmative wasted all of his advance speech on a lot of bull about a picture he made up. You'll have to hand it to him—he can spread the gravy. He didn't advance one argument and scarcely talked about the subject. I think since we have shown this expedition to be a wild farce that we should win the debate.

Second Affirmative, Byle Jitneys:

Doctor Loose and Friends: The last speaker is incorrect when he says that our figures are wrong. I looked over those statistics and found that they are right to the seventy-eighth decimal place. I wish also to declare the evidence of the first negative speaker as void. Therefore, since I have shown that the negative don't know what they are talking about, we demand the decision in favor of the affirmative.

HAMILTONIAN

But, My Boy, When It Comes to O-rating—

EVERY custom, I suppose, good or evil, will eventually be tracked to its primum mobile, its vera causa, its fons et origo, its causa causans, or, as we might say if English were sanctioned for such expression, its unmoved mover. For everything, we have been urged to believe, is so provided. Smoking, for instance, became popular about the time that W. Raleigh and pipe were inundated by an over-quick-witted handmaid. Adam created the first thirst when he accepted the crude applejack offered by Eve, the woman. And annals of times equally ancient let fall vague, furtive suggestions about the "last trump." These are the sources of old, well-established and deadly habits, all of them still making more or less progress. There is another, perhaps a bit decadent and of uncertain reputation as to deadliness, but nevertheless worthy of considerable publicity. This one, too, broke out far back in the murky past, in those dim, awful days when Pithecanthropi Erecti peopled this terraqueous globe, when China was still civilized, when dinosaurs gamboled on the Jersey meadows and ichthesauri trampled out the route of the Erie Canal, when collar buttons were undiscovered and tailors operated on the actual natural products. In that scrubby age took place a woeful catastrophe. One Pithecanthropus Erectus, more bold, more thoughtlessly original than his fellows, stood before them and addressed them collectively. He did for the first time what we speak of technically as delivering an oration. And as far as can be learned, his intentions were irreproachable. This new idea of his was just his little method of wooing fickle Fame. It was profoundly successful.

The thing became a fad—and the fad a habit. At that point the few remaining stable-minded P.E.'s gave up. For, as some apparently well-informed sage has put it:

> Habit is like a kay-bill;
> We weave a thread of it each day
> Until it becomes so strong
> We cannot break it.

Rotten verse but very convenient thought. Anyway this failing of oratory became a most tenacious cable. It came to be regarded as a reputable pastime among human beings and some even made it an occupation. Mr. M. T. Cicero acquired the habit of ascending frequently to the rostrum and explaining to the populi Romani the inner working of the shady career of L. S. Catiline. To Mr. Catiline himself he would turn and with a gesture of abhorrence growl scornfully, "Quo usque tandem abutere, Catilina, patientia nostra" (pronounced as the Germans thought the Romans did). And Lucius would shrink down in his senatorial bench in abject terror. The populi Romani looked upon it as royal sport. But they are not to be blamed. They were handicapped by ignorance. Even as late as the time of Will Shakespeare it was considered folly to send forth an army unprovided with one of these Elizabethan, gore-inducing harangues. Our own Revolutionary War was but the inevitable result of an overpowering wave of Oral English. Mr. P. Henry spoke very nicely. A. Hamilton was close behind him. The splendor of a political career in those bright days rested on one's ability to spread the awning of a well-nigh visible vocabulary over the heads of a wide-mouthed assemblage.

Oratory in these vernal days enjoys little of its former distinction. The merciless force of modern pragmatism has driven it to its lair. Like the Demon Rum, it is succumbing before the terrible onslaught of American practicality. For oratory and inebriety go hand in hand. Oratory, you understand, is a species of lingual intoxication. It demands that one declare most persuasively what someone in a fit of diabolical inspiration has contrived. But oratory is not extinct. Not by any means. At the lips of W. J. Bryan it is a power in displacing warships and gunpowder for the installment of the national beverage and universal amity. And in its own lair where we have seen it driven it flourishes in the fertile soil of budding American manhood. For this dernier resort is an American college. Twice weekly from its chapel stage belabored oratory thrusts forth its darts against the world of practicality. Here the nation's problems are solved. Here the alliance of Kaiser and Almighty is authenticated and protested, here the public at large is inspired to more noble effort and here the fate of the thousand little things of universal importance is irrevocably declared.

Someone back in the palmy past, someone perhaps greater than I, observed that appearances are deceitful. I confirm it. They are. That inoffensive-looking vine-clad Chapel would hardly impress one as being a dungeon of torture. But who will deny me? Only we initiated can tell of the secret horrors of the place. The Freshman, duly captured, classified and subdued, having about succeeded in separating from his body the last morsel of paint-clad epidermis, finds himself confronted quite suddenly with the task of procuring a declamation. After some indecision he selects one—one old and tried, fraught with possibilities of touching almost every note in the gamut of human passions. With this he makes his debut. The preliminaries go off without many catastrophes. Under the guidance of a person of very audible determination he masters innumerable surds, inflections, gestures—all those little vocal touches that proclaim the artist. So he advances upon the real appearance with considerable assurance. He considers inviting the High School to come and hear their alumnus, but finally yielding to an innate modesty, decides to revel in his first triumph alone. About the time the first speaker begins on the morning of the triumph the ecstacy begins to fade. And when his own turn comes he is very low. He experiences a little difficulty in walking up as he would have liked to have done it. The piercing shriek emitted at intervals from his newly acquired shoes may be responsible. He ascends to a position of a good deal of prominence. Every man in that room is glaring directly at him! His condition is much like that a man in a position to know has ascribed to war. He shakes one limb in an attempt to release a trouser leg from the clutches of what he realizes with a blush is a garter. His hands tremble. He knew he'd been drinking too much coffee. Both trousers legs develop an exaggerated ague. With a gesture of despair he prepares to deliver up the ghost but is arrested in the midst of the delivery by the dull red of a glaring eye. Hope and fear combine to inspire him. With alien voice he begins, "By the shore of the sea a boy stood—alone." He has been instructed to put himself in the place of that small boy, to imagine himself there, alone, on the shore of that sea. But even his imagination seems to be paralyzed. He can think of nothing in the world that interests him less than the predicament of a small boy alone at the seashore. He is occupied entirely with the fate of an altogether different small boy under absolutely different conditions. He realizes suddenly that his mind is quite blank. The whole thing is gone. He hasn't the slightest idea whether Christopher Columbus is a Mexican President or an old Roman gladiatorial lion. He has a faint suspicion that the gentleman is in some way closely allied with the Prince of the Brimstone Bakery. But he has no earthly reason for expressing the ungrounded suspicion to this glaring audience. He is startled by an Upsonic growl. An unfamiliar name is announced and a countenance quite as green as his own rises from the diabolical haze. He suspects that he is no longer required there and, with the wild abandon of the mountain goat, he hurls himself from the dizzy height. His retreat is covered by a cloud of remorse brightened in spots, however, by the undeniable feeling that he has been snatched from the claws of a deliberate, horrible disease.

"Those are the simple facts of the case," as our own P. of E. puts it. I have nothing to bet that they are true. But in my defence I protest that this is not a typical case. Some men go through the whole four eternities of pitfalls without a casualty. Some even win prizes for this oral expression. But some, it is true, are grossly mistreated at the hands of Mistress Fortune. To certain of us the whole thing has the appearance of being the least admirable of all the contrivances of the Fallen Angel. But when we amble round the curve on the last lap of this linguacious struggle, in other words, when we have delivered what we consider our "coup d'etat" and settle back with reasonable assurance that we are not to appear again, then we are in a position to appreciate the supreme excellence of this Oral English. And when, later on, we gather round a Hofbrauesque board, back down behind a crock of cool tea and argue over the uster-be's with some unfortunates who had to go to Yale or Princeton or some other hole, then may we rise, expand modestly, gesture inclusively with the right and give utterance unobtrusively, "But, my boy, when it comes to o-rating——"

Addendum: For the convenience of those not fundamentally acquainted with common usage we suggest. The common interpretation of the abbreviation P. of E. is Prince of Entertainers. It has particular reference to a gentleman of no slight fame in these precincts. It may be construed also as meaning Pride of new England or things even less admirable. In courtesy we desist.

The Rocky Road

IMAGINE, gentle peruser, if you can, a balmy Tuesday afternoon in February. Time, 2:30. Having imagined that, picture in your mind's eye about twenty-two of us perambulating in the general direction of Knox Hall (first floor-rear-middle). Other of us Superinclined, jeering our way toward the other cinch elective, stop to hear Pete Sottong say, "You're wrong, it ain't no cinch to keep awake in here." Truer words was never spuk, say us. But we hie back to the main theme.

Enter ensemble, please, into the college hole of Calcutta, hard seated, superheated. This den possesses an awfully well-built bar (makes your mouth water, y'know), behind which it stands—Rocks is it. On the walls relief maps jut out, but no one as yet ever got relief from them.

Now it begins to commence to start to apply the Kultur. For the benefit of the uneducated Kultur means something not yet defined. Here and there It glances furtively, then: "Mr. Woolnough abwesen?" "No, I'm here," pipes Adariah. "Then please get out from behind of Mr. Patter-some. We'll use another book soon, very inexpensive book this (fantastic and erratic visions of three-pence haypenny float around). A book I want everyone to buy, costing not much, and an invaluable aid in our work. It is called 'Duodecahedral Minerals and Their Deteriorates.' These books are for sale at the Bookstore, at $3.75, I believe." At the hindermost woids viginti jaws dropped, twenty-odd to be accurate, and twenty-odd remarks passed around generously, twenty-odd eyes were pasted gluefully at one odd Rocks. Latter held his ground. Twenty-odd gradually came to. For the following full five minutes Rocks meanders with a mazy motion. Hither and thither behind the bar, dodging epithets and $3.75 bills, he keeps meandering.

Rabble having subsided insufficiently, he shoots some more at them: "Please answer 'YES' to your name for the purpose of assuring the Bookstore management of the exact number of copies wanted—Mr. Baumer?"

"Ah-a-a-no."
"Mr. Bissell?"
"No."
"Mr. Boyce?"
"No."
"Mr. Brockway?"
"No."
"Mr. Syringe Donoghue?"
"No."
"W. E. Donohue?"
"Naw."

"I perceive that you are a little backward in your use of the affirmative, so please take these cards and write thereon whether you wish book or not." (Echo, "Or not.") Cards circulate with little opposition, and handed in with less.

"Ah-er-I was very much,—extremely pleased to have this buteful pome handed to me by one of the most interested and ambitious members of the class," rumbles Rocks. (Pause). "Shoot the poem," sings raucous Dan McGrew Robson. Say Rocks: "I hesitate, because I fear I'll be unable to eject the true feeling and bathos into this poem which it should perspire." Oration declaimed as follows:

"Rockolgy is an inspiring class.
I like it.
Although its teacher's on the bias,
I like it.
When in that room we take our place,
We see in front that handsome face,
There's nothing in it bad or base—
I lie, kid."

(Effect baffled our linotyper.)

The bartender now returns to the main theme of the day: "Over in the Mediterranean Sea there was once upon a time an island, containing a volcano. The volcano blew up; its dust went six time around the globe, and settled on the tips of both Poles and Fins."

Lantern-jawed Cal: "Didn't the action of that volc make the water more shallower in that place?" Answer: "Undoubtedly so. Yet there is no data, and we do not know, but of course not, it made it much deeper. Is that clear to all of you?"

Over hill and dale takes up next few minutes scratching his nose on some cards, unintelligent muttering interspersed. These cards supposedly contain notes. On a sudden his ears move intelligently and he stops scratching nose to speak: "Mr. E. Griffith and Missed-her Higgins, will you please wake up?" "Damn right," says our complete visionary.

"Now will you please wake the rest of the class up?" The two antynyms make business of rousing others. Indifferent success. Red Riding Hood rubs eyes, gets up, and syncopates out the family entrance.

"Gents, tomorrow we will have movies." Different success. "Geraldine Farrar and Marguerite Clark, accompanied by Donald Brian, will be shown walking up the Giant's Causeway, after having kissed the Blarney stone. Their basaltic joints will be shown." (From card-table in rear: "Oh, Frank!") Joe Whitcombe and Brock come to life. Curling-iron Yule falls off seat at sound of bell. Stampede. All quiet along the Potomac.
